For the Capitals, the moment that became a fixture in their playoff series against the Bruins came about two games into Game 6 of the Stanley Cup Final when goalie Braden Holtby stopped the Bruins from scoring another goal with two minutes left in regulation. In the end, Holtby and the Penguins defeated the Capitals in OT to win their third championship in four years.. "I mean, you do get a little nervous after that," Alex Ovechkin said of the scenario played out for him.

Second, what's wrong with this place? Seriously. Not only has there never been a bike bridge in San Francisco (as opposed to cities such as New York, San Diego, and Portland), but it also has a high degree of traffic congestion, especially at rush hour. Even a bridge crossing the bay has, "at peak hour of traffic" a pedestrian crossing.. The city of San Francisco can easily handle the problems of both pedestrians and traffic better than most major cities in this country..
